Tandsoy's peculiar ideas of the reformation of what were considered incorrigible boys. His theory was that the germ of honesty was a powerful element in the makeup of the most deprayed character, and that a course of training devised to bring out the best things in human nature was better than repression of the bad. In other words, the twentieth century notion of dealing with all criminals tends rather to the idea of making bad men better, instead of simply depriving them of the chance of doing evil-the idea that reformation, instead of puntasment, is the last end of the law, Judge Lindsey reports that out of 700 boys trusted to deliver themselves to the reformatory only five attempted to evade the sentence. It will be a brighter day for the welfare of the race when we all try to save the boys, instead of giving them up to evil ways

Now here comes a moral that may perhaps impress itself on business men and selling agents in other lines. This company had taken the precaution be-fore the war began to study the man-ufacture of ball bearings, instead of devoting itself exclusively to the selfing end. Its chief engineer had been over to Berlin and spent 15 months in the factory there—in fact, some of the improved machinery in that Ber-lin plant had been installed on the Initiative of the American house, Except for this first-hand knowledge the company might have found it a slow and difficult process to establish the manufacture of ball bearings on a large scale; but now it is going ahead rapidly with a plant that will increase its output a thousand per cent inside of a year. Already a quarter of a million dollars' worth of improved machinery has been bought for the new plant, In the Berlin factory one operator tended only one machine. Here one operator will tend four machines. This is just an instance of the improved methods to be adopted which will offset some of the barriers formerly sup-posed to stand in the way of making these goods economically in America. The new plant will employ five hundred men at first; ultimately it is probable that thousands will be employed. This is a very typical and concrete instance of what the war is doing for us. When we get out and hunt for them we can find hundreds of new industries in embryo. They are not making any noise. The shuffle goes on very silently.—Saturday Evening Post.
